Disability Disclosure Form

Educational institutions have a duty under the Equality Act (2010) to make 'reasonable adjustments' to ensure that students with disabilities are not placed at a substantial disadvantage in their access to services, assessment and teaching.

The University and its colleges make some adjustments in anticipation of disabled students' support requirements, e.g. improving physical access to buildings, but also appreciate that individuals are different and further changes may need to be considered and implemented.

Any disability disclosure will be dealt with confidentially and sensitively. If you tell us what your difficulties are then we can discuss appropriate support. If you have not told us about your disability when you please tell us now.

In order to provide study support, relevant departments and colleges of the University may need to share information about your needs. Information will only be shared with your explicit consent on a need-to-know basis with relevant people, such as the lecturers and tutors who will teach you and relevant library and support staff.

Why it is important to disclose

We want you to have the best possible experience of College life and studying at St Anne's, Oxford. By disclosing in confidence the nature of your disability and by discussing your needs with professional staff we can put in place reasonable measures to assist you.

Who can assist you?

Here at St Anne's we have a Student Disability Coordinator, Mrs Sheila Smith, who liaises with the College Nurse, the College Doctors at the Jericho Health Centre, and the University Disability Advisory Service. She also works closely with the Senior Tutor, the Dean of Welfare and the Academic Registrar on academic matters and exam arrangements. We have excellent staff on the domestic side of College life who ensure that the necessary living and dining arrangements for students with disabilities are taken care of. (If you have an Open Offer we will pass the form to the college you are allocated in August).

I consent to disclosure within the above limits	Yes <input type="checkbox"/>	No <input type="checkbox"/>
